Your AI helper at the office

An easy guide for the person who uses this computer every day.
No computer or AI knowledge needed.

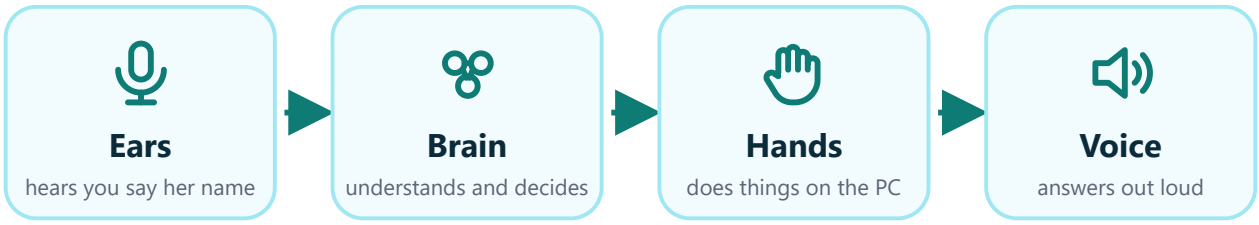

Just talk to her | Safe - risky things need the owner's OK | Works from your phone

Office PC · RTX 5060 Ti 16 GB · your assistant may have her own name (for example Nova)

HELLO!

Meet your assistant

This computer has a helper called Neko - or the name the owner gave her when she was installed (for example Nova). In this guide we write Neko; just use her real name instead.

A strong brain

This PC has a powerful graphics card, so she uses a big, smart AI right here. It's private: your questions don't leave this computer unless she needs the internet (weather, music, web search).

Talk like to a person

No special words.

"Neko, what's the time in London?"

"Neko, open Excel" If she doesn't understand, she asks.

She is careful

Anything risky - deleting, sending, paying, shutting down - waits for the owner's approval. You can't break anything by asking.

She remembers

Tell her things once and she keeps them:

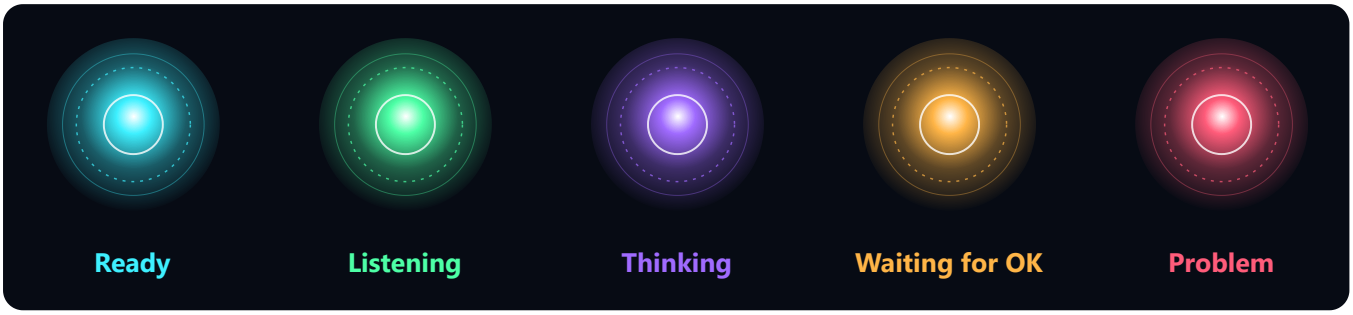

"remember that the courier comes on Thursdays"

This PC has its own memory, separate from the owner's laptop.

HOW TO TALK TO HER

Say her name, then what you want

She starts with the computer and waits quietly. The glowing orb on the screen shows what she's doing:

Say her name

Say Neko (or her real name) clearly, then your request in one go:

"Neko, play some relaxing music"

Wait a second

The orb turns green while she listens and violet while she thinks. Then she answers out loud, with the words on screen.

Keep talking

For 15 seconds after her answer you can just talk - no name needed. To stop her talking:

"Neko, stop"

Prefer typing?

Click the box under the orb and type, then press Enter. Typing always works, even when it's noisy.

Can't see her?

After 4 quiet minutes she fades away but still listens. Say her name and she comes back.

Tip: if she keeps mishearing a name, say "Neko, learn the word Shapla" - or just type it.

SAFETY

Who decides what?

You can ask for anything. Neko sorts every action into three colours:

Green - just does it

open an app, play music, answer a question, read a file

Yellow - asks you first move a file, type into a field, run your program, send your screen

Red - asks every time

delete, send, pay, shut down, publish an update (phone: + PIN)

You can do	Only the owner can do
Chat, ask questions, get explanations	Approve risky actions (yellow and red)
Open apps, websites and folders; control music and volume	Upgrade Neko or add new abilities
Read files, make summaries and study notes	Add new programs for her to run
Set reminders, use saved skills	Pair phones, change the PIN
Run the programs the owner has taught her (they may ask the owner)	Connect this PC with the owner's laptop

When something needs the owner: the owner gets Approve / Deny buttons on their phone and she does it as soon as they approve. The approval window on this screen says Owner approves on their phone - you can still press Deny if it's not what you wanted.

Emergency stop: press Ctrl+Shift+F12 on the keyboard. Everything stops at once until someone presses Resume.

EVERYDAY HELP

Things to ask

Say...	What happens
"explain how VAT works, simply"	A clear answer in plain words.
"write a polite message to a customer about a late delivery"	She writes it - copy it where you need it.
"show me how a solar panel works"	A panel opens next to her with a picture.
"what's the weather tomorrow?"	The weather (needs internet).
"what's on my screen?"	She looks at the screen and explains it.
"open Chrome" "open my Downloads"	Opens apps, websites, files and folders.
"close Excel" "minimise Word" "switch to WhatsApp"	Manages the windows.
"volume up" "mute" "unmute"	Sound control.
"in Calculator click Seven" "what buttons are in this window?"	She presses buttons inside apps by their names.
"lock my PC"	Locks the screen when you leave the desk.

Asking, not ordering: you never need exact words. Say it your way - if she isn't sure, she asks you.

MUSIC · FILES · REMINDERS

Make the day easier

Music

"play some Bangla songs" "pause"

"resume" "louder" "play next"

"stop the music"

When a song ends, the next one starts by itself. While music plays, pause, skip or stop work without her name.

Files and PDFs

"read the price list pdf"

"summarize this"

"make simple notes and a cheat sheet from this PDF"

Click a file in File Explorer first, or say its name - she looks in the allowed folders.

Reminders

"remind me at 4 to call the supplier"

"remind me in 30 minutes to check the oven"

"what are my reminders?"

She says it out loud - and messages your phone if it's paired.

Teach her

"learn this: the delivery van is the white Toyota, number 12-3456"

"remember that Mr. Karim pays on the 5th"

She uses it later when you ask. The owner can see and remove what she learned.

PROGRAMS AND SHORTCUTS

Your work programs, by voice

The owner can teach Neko the shop's programs (for example the billing software). Then you can just ask:

"which programs can you run?" "open Print SOFT" "stop Print SOFT"

Some programs ask the owner for approval each time; others the owner has marked as always allowed.

Saved skills - many clicks in one sentence

Show her once

Ask her to do the steps one by one, for example:

"open Print SOFT" "in Print SOFT click New bill" "click Today"

Save it

"save that as start a new bill"

Next time

"do start a new bill"

She repeats all the steps. "what skills do you know?" shows the list.

Good to know: skills can also come from the owner's laptop - the owner can send useful skills to this PC.

ON YOUR PHONE

Talk to her from your phone

If the owner paired your phone as an everyday phone, you can chat with Neko in Telegram - from anywhere:

- Type, or send a voice note - she answers with a voice note.
- Send a photo with what is this?
- Send a PDF with summarize this (it's saved on the office PC).
- "remind me at 6 to lock the shutter" "play music on the PC" "send me my screen" (asks the owner)
- /status - is the office PC on? /call - a voice call with her (needs Tailscale).

Risky requests: she asks the owner on their phone and tells you she's waiting. You can't approve, and you can't upgrade her or change her settings from your phone.

Everyday phone: risky things wait for the owner.

CHEAT SHEET

Quick list of things to say

QUESTIONS

If something isn't right

Problem	Try this
She doesn't react	Say her name clearly and pause a moment. Or type in the box under the orb.
She heard the wrong word	Say it again more slowly, type it, or "learn the word ..."
She says it needs the owner's OK	That's normal for risky things - wait for the owner, or ask them.
No sound from music	She unmutes the PC herself; also check the speakers are on.
She says she needs internet	Ask the owner - internet is switched on in her settings.
My phone gets no answer	Is the office PC on? Send /status. If you got a new phone, the owner must pair it again.
She did something wrong	Say "Neko, stop" - or press Ctrl+Shift+F12 to stop everything.
An update is offered	The small Neko icon near the clock → Install update (or leave it for the owner).

Privacy: what you say is not recorded. Conversations and memories stay on this PC. The owner can see what she did (her activity list) and what she remembers.
